

Who are we?

Free open-access, peer-reviewed journal with over 20+ years history

Publish high quality original research, reviews and protocol articles that contribute to improving the clinical understanding of appropriate care for people with pain.

What do we do?

We aim to publish articles that influence or add to the body of evidence related to the rehabilitation of people in pain.

Publish papers that are of international relevance and have an over-arching applied clinical focus or serve to inform clinical practice.

What do we want?

We welcome submission of papers that show depth, rigour and originality.

Special interest in articles that look at the extended scope of physiotherapy in pain management.

Most types of article will be considered for publication.

What makes us different?

Swift publication: articles immediately assigned to an issue upon acceptance.

We publish a wide variety of methods including service evaluations.

Help develop novice authors: we are willing to work with novice authors to increase chances of publication.
